

Oregon Travel Experience and the Oregon Heritage Tree Program
MAYNARD C. DRAWSON MEMORIAL AWARD
Nomination introduction and summary

Maynard Charles Drawson (1925 – 2012) is considered the founder of Oregon’s official statewide heritage tree program. Founded in 1995 the Oregon Heritage Tree Program is administered by Oregon Travel Experience (OTE). The program was adopted when Drawson contacted the agency’s governing council urging them to assume responsibility for a uniquely Oregon heritage program.

Oregon Travel Experience and the Oregon Heritage Tree Committee have established an award in Drawson’s name. The award honors individuals (or groups) who have championed Oregon’s trees with the same fervor and success as Maynard “The Tree Man” Drawson.

Maynard Drawson’s Story:

A native Oregonian and Portlander, Drawson chose to follow his father’s professional footsteps as a barber. The young Drawson settled in Salem and followed his social and exploratory nature by embracing the great Oregon outdoors. His personal roster of friendships included professional business people, legislators and other naturalists and historians. An avid fisherman and outdoorsman as well as history-buff and writer, he authored a five volume series entitled “Treasures of the Oregon Country.”

Drawson’s natural tendencies towards exploration led him deeper into Oregon’s wild where he connected with other “big tree” aficionados. His hiking trips into Oregon’s deep forests culminated in several big tree nominations to (and their acceptance into) the National Big Tree Registry.

As Drawson’s relationship with trees and tree preservation matured, he collaborated with state and federal officials to conserve a special group of Douglas and western hemlock trees. The Polk County preserve was named “Valley of the Giants”—and stands as a magnificent lasting reminder of the old growth timber that once adorned the Oregon Coast Range.

Drawson’s affection for Oregon’s trees led to further inspiration—he imagined a statewide heritage program that would weave historic events, places, and people together—connecting Oregonians to their much loved and significant trees.

After pitching his idea to several state agencies, Drawson’s enthusiasm and perseverance were rewarded when the Oregon Travel Information Council agreed to implement a public statewide program. The Council delegated program management to its semi-independent state agency (OTE) and modeled the criteria on OTE’s Oregon Historical Marker Program.
